EIGHT BURNED.

Disastrous Hotel Fire in Albany, New York.

The Flames Envelop the Delavan House Before the Occupants Can be Aroused.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 31.—Four ragged walls and a mass of smouldering ruins mark the sight of the Delavan house today. Two hundred and fifty of its guests, thankful that they escaped, though only with the clothes on their backs, are quartered at the other hotels The list of casualties are as follows:

Dead—Mrs H S Fookes, formerly of Dayton, Ohio

Injured—Henry F Fookes, Rochester, injured internally and face and hands burned, will recover. Mrs Benj. F. Heilman, Brooklyn, face cut and internally injured; will recover. Benj F. Heilman, Brooklyn, ankle injured. Edward Walsh, face badly burned Edward Murphy, bad burns. E A. Manchester, Auburn, hands and arms badly burned. E W. Arnold, Rochester, bruised by jumping from a window. D H Brockway, New York, right arm badly cut and both arms burned. James Hennessey, fireman, of steamer No. 4, struck on the head by a brick when one of the walls fell, about midnight.

The police are unable to account for eight persons, two maids and six guests, who were in the Delavan hotel before the fire. They say that while it is possible that these persons may now be in some hotel it is quite probable that their bodies are hidden in the ruins.

Among those unaccounted for are the following: Mary and Nora Sullivan, maids; Bridget Fitzgibbons, servant; an Italian named Fernando; two vegetable cooks. Up to 12 o'clock none of the missing had not been heard from. No bodies have as yet been recovered from the ruins.

MANY LOSE THEIR LIVES.

3 P. M.—That a number of corpses lie beneath the ruins seems most probable Chef Querena Tomagni, who was on the top floor when the cry of fire was given, tells a horrible tale of what he saw. "I was in my room," said he, "when someone yelled 'fire' The hall was filled with stifling smoke and the end which led to the stair cases was blocked with a mass of flames I turned to run the other way. On the floor of the corridor lay three human beings. Whether they were men or women I could not say. They were shrieking for help. I could not stop to save them. The flames were leaping along the corridor and I was losing my senses from the fearful smoke that rendered life in the place almost impossible. I passed over the spot where the unfortunates lay They grabbed my legs. It was by main force that I pulled myself away and managed to gain a window and lower myself five stories by means of a rope. I do not know what became of the unfortunate beings who lay in the corridor I do not think they ever escaped" This is a correct list of the missing.

Record Telesform, fireman in the kitchen

Bridget Fitzgibbons, employe in the kitchen.

Nugenta Sturena, vegetable cook.

Amelia Tomagni, sister of the head chef.

Thomas Conner, carpet sweeper.

Simon Myers, copperman.

Mary Fitzgibbons, chamber maid.

Kate Crowley, employed in the kitchen.

Fernando Bonlett, fireman in the kitchen.

Storekeeper Bronk and Chief Chef Tomsgini furnished the Associated Press man with the list of names and that there could be no doubt that all of the above—at the very least, most of them—met their doom in the fire. The chef, whose sister is among the missing, was nearly heartbroken.

CROPS RUINED.

A Cold Wave Sweeps Over Balmy Florida.

The Mercury Drops to Fourteen Degrees Above Zero, Killing Oranges and Vegetables.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 31.—The mercury went down to fourteen above zero at the signal station, in this city, just before sunrise this morning, this record being one degree colder than the temperature during the great freeze of 1886, and the lowest since 1835. The thermometer at the station is 100 feet above the ground, and the surface readings about town average from 10 to 3 degrees lower Reports from Tistusville, Tampa, Ocala, Gainsville, Palatka and Sanford, indicate that the mercury dropped to about eighteen above zero in those localities.

The orange and vegetable crops are practically ruined. The best estimates place the number of oranges at present on the trees at fully 2,600,000 boxes, and the officials of the Florida fruit exchange in this city think fully two million boxes have been frozen either wholly or partially. If this estimate is correct the remaining six hundred thousand boxes will bring fabulous prices. These reports cannot be verified till tonight or tomorrow, but the best informed fruit men say "the jig is up" with the orange crops of 1893-94 Ice formed on the streets of Jacksonville this morning and in small places about the docks

The annual meeting of the First Church of Christ will be held at the chapel tonight. Reports from every department of the work will be presented. These reports will be interspersed between selections of music and speeches by the pastor and other members of the church. Every disciple in Fort Wayne is invited to be present.

AFTER MANY WEEKS

Ex-Congressman Butler is Located by His Brother.

The Unfortunate Man is Driven Insane by Business and Financial Troubles.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec 31.—Dr. R. W. W Butler, of this city, a brother of ex Congressman Butler, of Pennsylvania, who turned up so mysteriously yesterday at Indianapolis after several months' absence, has been actively engaged for some time past in trying to locate the missing man. The doctor was apprised of his brother's whereabouts by the Associated Press dispatch of last night. He at once telegraphed to Indianapolis an inquiry and if the reply indicates that the man there is really the long absent brother, he will take immediate steps to have him cared for. Dr. Butler stated that his brother had been in financial straits previous to his disappearance, and this trouble had undoubtedly driven him insane.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind, Dec. 31.—When ex-Congressman Butler, who has just been identified in this city after a long and unexplainable disappearance, was shown the Associated Press dispatch from his brother, R. W Butler, of Cleveland, he said he had received no message as yet from Dr. Butler. He repeated the statement that his mind was a blank as to his departure from home. He also said that he did not think he was insane, for he felt none of the things accompanying insanity. The book agency for which Mr. Butler had been canvassing since November 24 reports his accounts straight and speaks highly of his success and intelligent presentation of certain books which he was selling.

SHORT ON DIGNITY

But Long on Flour Were the Traders Today.

New Year's Revel on the Chicago Board of Trade Observed With Enthusiasm.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—The annual New Year's revel on the board of trade was observed today with unusual enthusiasm. The market was neglected during the past hour and at the tap of the bell at noon every trader on the floor was long on sacks of flour and short on dignity. The galleries were crowded with people who had come to see fun and the performance was fully up to expectations. When the market closed the ball opened.

The festivities began with a series of blood curdling yells and a vivid imitation of the ghost dance. A short flour trader with a high silk hat, who was leading the vocal exercises, was suddenly cut short in his musical flights by the swift descent of a bursting sack of flour. With this signal every man on the floor entered energetically into the attempt to pound every other man with a flour sack. Hats were battered and hurled towards the ceiling, coats were torn, men were upset and for a half hour a merry war was waged in a mist of flying flour. When the stock of flour was exhausted the sample tables were robbed of barley, oats and corn, and the air was full of flying missiles, until exhaustion ended the fun. When it was over the pit looked as though it had been struck by a blizzard and the traders resembled a choice collection of tramps

CINCINNATI, Ohio, December 31.—Instead of the usual wild horse play by members of the chamber of commerce on the last day of the year, the mischief loving men curbed their propensities in that direction today and listened to an orchestral concert, the players using the aggregated grain tables for a platform.

The first curling game of the winter season was played on the ice at Brookside farm yesterday afternoon, and 200 spectators watched the game. The teams were captained by James Gillie and Dan McKay. While McKay's team showed some clever playing, it was outclassed by the opposing side under Gillie, who won by a score of fifteen to eight.

There is a new case of scarlet fever at No. 415 East Wayne street.

INNOCENT MEN

Convicted of Murder and Sentenced to Prison

Four Years Ago Will Now be Pardoned by the Discovery of the Real Murderer.

PITTSBURG, Pa, Dec 31.—By the confession of the real murderer, it is likely that Andrew Toth, Geo. Rusnake and Michael Sabol, who are now serving life sentences in Riverside penitentiary for the murder of Michael Quinn, will be released.

On New Year's day, 1891, the Carnigie Steel company had trouble with its laborers at the Edgar Thompson steel works at Braddock. About 700 Slavs and Hungarians were employed at the works, among them the three who are now in prison. On the night of December 31, a crowd of the strikers descended upon the works, but were driven back. The following noon the mob attacked the works again and quite a battle ensued. Michael Quinn, an engineer, was struck upon the head and fatally injured The next day a large number of arrests were made, among them being Toth, Rusnake and Sabol They were tried and convicted of Quinn's murder and sentenced to be hanged, but later their sentences were commuted to life imprisonment

A short time ago two Hungarians quarreled near Scranton and each had the other arrested. One of them sent for the police officials and told them that the other prisoner was a murderer, having killed a man in a riot at Braddock, on New Year's day, 1891 The police investigated and became convinced that the story was true.

Attorney Blakely, who has charge of the case for the convicted men, will leave for Scranton today or tomorrow to complete the evidence that he will lay before the pardon board.

SHOT HIM DEAD.

"Pike" Sandusky, an Old Time Miner, Killed.

He Was the First to Pull His Gun but it Missed Fire, and His Enemy Shot Him.

BUTTE, Mont, Dec 31—"Pike" Sandusky, an old timer in northern Montana and discoverer of the famous Goldbug groupe of mines of the Little Rockies, was shot and killed in the mining camp bearing his name by Harvey Curry

The men had been enemies for several years and the report is that when they met yesterday, Sandusky was the first to pull a gun, but it missed fire and Curry shot him dead

The dead man was about fifty years of age and was well known in nearly every mining camp in the west

WINE DRINKERS

Will Have to Pay Higher Prices for Their Sherry.

WASHINGTON, Dec 31—Sherry wine will be higher in price, according to United States Consul Adams, at Cadiz He reports to the state department that owing to a dry spring, to phylloxera and to lack of ready money by the grape growers, the vintage of 1894 shows a marked decrease in quantity, even as compared with last year, which was below the average, the decrease being estimated at one-third of that year's product On the other hand the quality of the new wine is very superior and much above the average and sales have been made at $30 per butt, which is much above the average price of recent years.

TOO MUCH DYNAMITE.

It Demolished the Safe and Awakened the Citizens.

ELGIN, Texas, Dec 31—Cracksmen utterly demolished the vault and safe of the Elgin bank. Two explosions of dynamite were necessary, and were so heavy that besides blowing the vault and safe to pieces, the furniture and floor were also badly splintered. The heavy reports awakened citizens, and the lookout for the thieves was captured. The alarm was given to the three men in the bank, however, and they escaped. The man captured gave his name as A H Foster. The three who escaped secured no money.

KILLED HIS SWEETHEART

And Then Cut His Own Worthless Throat.

MOBILE, Ala, Dec. 31—A special to the News from Monroeville says: Doso Metz killed his sweetheart, Jennie Smith, and then cut his own throat and died. The couple were to be married New Year's day and Metz's jealousy of the attentions of his sweetheart's former lover caused the deed.

Arrested for Perjury.

SEATTLE, Wash, Dec. 31—Dr. H. Books, president of the suspended Aberdeen, Wash, bank, has been arrested on a charge of perjury. It is charged that Books' personal property was listed to the county assessor as the bank's property, and that the bank thus paid taxes on Books' property.

Diphtheria Cure.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Five horses are now under inoculation here for the purpose of producing blood serum for the cure of diphtheria

He has been employed on the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western railroad and his home is in Pennsylvania. He declares that he had not been drinking and cannot account for being frozen.

The cutting scrape on Lafayette street, Saturday evening, was quite a savage affair. A colored man by the name of Dean, who works in the Pittsburg shops, was in the barber shop getting shaved when the fight began. He could not keep his fingers out of the muss and as a result two of them were nearly cut off. Dr Stemen sewed up the wounds. Dean lives at No. 84 West Main street.

Deacon S. V. White, a Wall street operator, lately ascended a pulpit in Brooklyn and preached a business sermon to young men. He gave them what he said was the business man's golden rule As he worded it, it was in three sections, as follows: "Cash no checks, lend no money and do no favors for others with money not your own." If he had advised them to be mighty particular how they cash checks and lend money even when it is their own, he would have given advice which was still better. The deacon said the ideal position for a business man who had been overtaken by a crash would be that in which he could say to all whom he owed, "All mine is gone, but here is thine."

Some of the collateral descendants of John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home," are still among the liveliest inhabitants of this country. One of these is Mr. Austin Payne Holcomb, grandnephew of John Howard Payne. Mr. Holcomb became a year or two ago the business manager of ex-Congressman Watson's paper at Atlanta. A little later Mr. Holcomb established in the same city the southern story paper which, remembering his famous ancestor, he named Home Sweet Home.

CUT HER HEAD OFF!

The Drunken Deed of a Pittsburg Man.

He Kills His Wife With a Hatchet and Then Cuts His Own Throat With a Razor.

PITTSBURG, Dec 31—William McMullen, a laborer, cut his wife's head almost off with a hatchet and then cut his own throat with a razor, about 3 30 this morning.

They had been quarreling early in the evening and McMullen hit his wife in the face with a beer bottle, cutting her badly. They quarreled again later and about 3 30 this morning their children were awakened by their mother's cries. The woman's head is frightfully cut and when found she was lying in a pool of blood.

After taking the life of his wife McMullen stepped into the kitchen, out of the sight of his children, who a moment later heard him fall to the floor with a groan. They ran to the door and found him lying under the stove. The man had cut his throat and jugular vein and died in about twenty minutes

The wife survived him but a short time. The youngest child, aged two years, had been sleeping with its mother, and its face was bespattered with the blood of the parent

THE SCREEN ORDINANCE

An Old Resident of the City Favors Its Passage.

Editor SENTINEL

The writer has thought proper to offer a few thoughts for the consideration of the public in regard to the ordinance before the city council to compel the saloonkeepers to remove their screens from their windows after 11 o'clock at night and on Sunday. Is it not strange that any councilman having any respect for himself or any desire to benefit the community should oppose such a law? It is a self-evident fact that they keep up their screens that they may violate the law, and yet councilmen who are sworn to support and obey the law refuse to pass a law to have them removed. The law is very lenient, entirely too much so. No other business, unless it is some other forms of dissipation, is carried on at such hours, and why do councilmen vote to sustain their action? It surely cannot be that they wish to avail themselves of an opportunity to thus violate the law. It must be that they have such a hankering for office that they are willing to sacrifice the good of the community and even their oaths to secure the votes of that class

The writer is glad to see that most of our city papers favor the passage of the law. All honor to THE SENTINEL, the News and the Gazette for the stand they have taken. The saloonkeepers are doing themselves an injury by the course they are taking. They are building up a sentiment of hostility to their business that will soon wipe them out of existence. That sentiment already exists to such an extent that the intensely democratic states of South Carolina and Georgia are passing laws to suppress them.

A MERRY CHASE.

The Police Swoop Down On the Aveline Hotel Bar.

Peter Deutschmann Bound Over in the Sum of $500—Cutting Affray Among Colored People.

The police and saloonkeepers are still at war, but the warfare is reduced from open hostilities to a sort of guerilla method Sudden ambushes, masked batteries and strategies of all kinds are now being employed The saloon men seem determined to sell, and have regular spotters who hang about and give timely warning The few day policemen are thus kept decidedly busy on Sundays

Yesterday was no exception, and there were some very exciting scenes along about five o'clock The police have long suspected that Pete Certia's Aveline hotel bar was doing business on the sly, and last evening they managed to get inside and find out the facts Certia's "spotter," it seems, gave the whole thing away and the officers ran him into the saloon through the Aveline hotel. Superintendent Liggett was the first to arrive but he found the door shut He immediately ordered it open. At first this was refused, but the officer finally got into the place, closely followed by Lieutenant Lapp and Officer Dora Hardendorf There was the bartender behind the counter and a fine free lunch spread out on the sideboard. There was every evidence of business being done, and after taking a survey of the lay out the officers left. En route to the station they accidentally dropped onto five men who had just come out of a saloon on Barr street, near the police headquarters. The officers at once entered the saloon, but were unable to get any evidence of a nature sufficient to incriminate the saloonkeeper.

Superintendent Liggett stated this morning that either Certia or his bartender would be arrested.

PETER DEUTSCHMANN.

Saturday THE SENTINEL contained an account of the arrest for larceny of Peter Deutschmann, a Pittsburg company employe, who lives at No. 90 East Lewis street Armed with a search warrant late Saturday afternoon, Superintendent Liggett and Sergeant Daseler went to the barn in the rear of Deutschmann's home Here an astonishing discovery was made The barn was filled with about two dray loads of stolen goods There were watch springs, dials, watchmaker's tools and jewelry of all kinds.

Some of these were evidently from the old Pretz jewelry store, formerly at 143 Calhoun street, which place was burglarized about three years ago. Other articles had once been the property of Young until lately the Arcade jeweler. There was a lot of gas and steam fittings, which the officers think was stolen from the store of Robert Spice last summer. A handsome silk United States flag was found, a bushel or two of nails, carpenter's tools, and a lot of Catholic Knights of America badges. Several trunks in the house were filled with articles. The officers took possession of the property, but left it at the house A magazine shotgun of modern pattern was also taken by the officers. The prisoner's wife has been visiting at Gar Creek

Before Mayor Oakley this morning Duetschmann plead not guilty. He said he bought the bicycle from some boys. During police court a telegram was received from Middlepoint saying that Duetschmann was wanted there for robbery. The evidence which is hourly accumulating against the man goes to prove that he is a desperate, all around burglar He was held in the sum of $500 and went to jail

NEW RUBBER GRANGE

John Gibson lives in the old canal boat on East Columbia street Saturday night he and some of his bosom cronies were holding a little festival when some of the guests became angry and threw the host out of the window without taking the trouble to raise it. Gibson picked himself up and went to the police station to complain The officers very promptly locked him up and then went down to the ark of Bachus and gathered in the other revelers

A CUTTING AFFAIR

There was a lively cutting affair on Lafayette street, near Holman, on Saturday evening about 6 o'clock George Rhodes and wife and Ed Ford and wife, all colored excepting Mrs. Ford, occupy a delapidated double house at Nos 262 and 264 Lafayette street. Ford is a barber. Saturday evening the Fords, together with a neighbor, Mrs Porter, were enjoying a chicken dinner The Fords seemed to be left out and entering the room during the festivities Ford began to get very "fussy" At this there was a war of words and latter the two colored men went outside to settle the difficulty. After heaving bricks at each other with out any great effect the two men rushed into the house and Rhodes went after Ford with a knife Mrs Ford attempted to stop the men and Rhodes cut her a fearful gash on the head The woman fell in a faint, and Rhodes, imbibed with a murderous frenzy, picked up a butcher knife and slashed away at Ford's heart He missed his mark, but struck the barber on the left arm, nearly severing that member from his body Rhodes then left the house and went to the police station and told the officers the whole story. Later he came back and gave himself up. Dr Miller looked after the wounded people and later Ford was taken to the Hope hospital

Rhodes and Ford were both arrested and on trial this afternoon before Squire Bohen

QUITE A ROBBERY.

Burglars Enter the Lee Boarding House on Harrison St.

Three Fine Watches and Twenty Dollars in Cash Taken—Nothing Found in Mohler's Room.

Quite a heavy robbery occurred last night at No. 120 Harrison street, in a boarding house kept by Mrs. Lee.

This morning when Mrs Lee, who was the first to get up, went down stairs, she found gentlemen's apparel scattered all over the hallway and down onto the front steps The front door was open and it was very evident that the place had been robbed during the night.

She at once gave the alarm, and going back to her own room looked for a fine gold watch which belonged to her sister, Miss Minnie Grote. The watch was gone. By this time the rest of the boarders began to invoice their belongings and found themselves minus large portions of their wearing apparel. In a few moments the clothing had been gathered up and tossed in a heap in the hall. Wrappers in blankets and quilts, the gentlemen went out and sorted over their garments. The schedule of losses was then found to be as follows:

Gold watch, valued at $75, and $10 in cash. Property of W. T. Milburn, of Root & Company.

Silver watch, valued at $25, and $10 in cash. Property of C D Miller, of the Seavy Hardware store.

The robbery must have occurred about 2 o'clock this morning as Mrs. Lee heard some one in the halls and thought it was some of the boarders. Thomas Aville and Messrs. Miller, Myers, Milburn and Mahon were all in one of the rooms until after midnight.

O L. Mohler, managing editor of the Gazette, has a room at the Lee boarding house The burglars went to Mohler's room and spent half an hour trying to find something worth carrying off. Upon discovering only a brass button in his trouser's pocket it is presumed the bold burglars left the house at once in great disgust.

W. T Milburn, who lost the gold watch, at once went to Green & Probarco's, the Arcade jewelers, and obtained the number of the time piece, they having repaired it only a short time ago.

Good bye old year

Turn over a new leaf Live right

THE SENTINEL will greet its readers as usual tomorrow

TREASURY officials believe receipts will equal expenditures when the collections from sugar become normal

THE bell ringers are waiting for the clock to strike that they may ring in Ninety Five The new year will come to us a pure white slate upon which we will write our life story for the year

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND repudiates the interview in which he was quoted as saying that the pope's decree against certain secret societies was of no force unless promulgated by the archbishops and that it lay with the archbishops to say whether it should be promulgated or not The archbishop was very indignant that he should be placed in such a false light before the people of the country as antagonizing the orders of the church

WHAT a world of happiness this would be if the Christian love the kindly influence the sentiment of helping one another that are such prominent features of the holiday season could continue throughout the whole year and manifest themselves in everyday life What good cheer and enjoyment and benefit and the betterment of the world they would bring Christianity ought not to be of that selfish mould which stops with self and that Christian who is content with his own happiness with out caring for or looking after the happiness of those about him has not got the right kind of religion The true Christian spirit ought to prompt us to carry the beneficent influences of religion into the every day walks of life and if it did so it would infuse a power and strength that would tell in the world's progress It should show itself in kind acts and good deeds in the sacrifice of self for the enjoyment of others in helping those who are not as fortunate as ourselves It may not always mean the giving of charity but it should mean the kind look the encouraging word and the extending of the helping hand whenever and wherever it is needed Such practical Christianity would make the world brighter and happier It would elevate manhood and womanhood and while benefitting others and carrying cheer into their lives would really add to our own happiness

With the ending of the old and the beginning of the new year people are inclined to review their private and business life of the past and profiting by their experiences map out a course to be followed for the year to come If they have made mistakes they resolve not to repeat them They start out in a new line of conduct with the determination to win success whether their past has been so or not The resolve is a good one and THE SENTINEL hopes everyone making it will remain true to his New Years determination and not allow any negligence or wrongful act to interfere with the making of his life that success which God designed it should be and which it can be if the right principles of action are followed —honesty industry and sobriety In this world of ours there are probably more life wrecks made through the use of intoxicating drinks than from any other cause Young men well equipped for the avocation which they enter start out with bright prospects only to lose winning success because they fall victims to the drink habit The professional the business, the working world have no place for the intemperate man While he is addicted to the rum habit he cannot work up to his best abilities and as its pernicious influences grow on him he finds himself crowded out and soon his life becomes a failure— simply because he made it so Young man if you want to live up to your possibilities if you desire to win the success which is yours with the beginning of the new year drop the drink habit Resolve not to touch the poison that can only bring you heart sorrow and adhering to your determination success will come to you Every business puts a premium on temperate men and they secure and hold positions where others fail

THE ordinance for the removal of the screens in the saloons after 11 o clock at night and on Sunday may or may not come up for final consideration at the meeting of the city council one week from tomorrow night At the last meeting, it will be remembered the vote on it was a tie— 7 to 7—one member Mr Kelker being absent Mayor Oakley cast his vote for it and it was declared passed It was discovered afterwards that, under the provisions of the charter, the mayor had no right to vote, and so the effect of it will be that the ordinance will go back to the council with two readings It can come up for final passage at the next meeting and if it does it cannot be told now what its fate will be If the members vote as they did before, its passage or defeat rests entirely with Councilman Kelker and how he will vote is not known certainly If he is true to the platform of the principles upon which he was elected and the best interests of the people, he will vote for the passage of the ordinance and it is certainly his duty to do so It cannot work harm to anybody If the saloons purpose obeying the Sunday and 11 o clock law they can have no good objection to it as it only removes the screens during hours that they are forbidden by law to do business With the screens up the officers have no means of knowing that the laws are complied with except by entering the saloon and it is of this alleged intrusion as we understand, that some of the saloonkeepers are complaining During the hours that they are forbidden to do business the saloon screens should be removed and we cannot see why anyone of our council men should vote against the proposed ordinance The large majority of the people of this city are in favor of its passage and it should become a law

A Count In the Family

Counts come high but some people must have them The widow of gallant Captain Audenried in his lifetime a soldier of Sherman's staff is just now paying for the luxury Mrs Audenried's grandfather —God bless him— was a honest and industrious an Irish man as ever trod the auld sod He came to this country poor as any but worked hard and became comfortably well off With the start he gave his son Coffin Colket that young man was enabled to further his fortune yet more Coffin Colket became a great street railway owner One of Coffin Colket's daughters married Captain Audenried He had rank among high society people She had plenty of money

Captain and Mrs Audenried had one daughter Florence As spoiled a child as ever lived Cute when she could not have her own way Florence married a paper Count one De la Forrest Divonne Divonne saddled himself up on Widow Audenried and blessed his stars that he had a soft seat for life

Mr Audenried had an income of $50 000 a year when Florence married her count None of it came from Audenried Its foundation was laid by the honest hardworking Irishman her grandfather His father had further increased it and left it to her Every cent of it was her own to do with absolutely as she wished But she gave $5 000 a year of it to Florence to support her count on The couple went to France and lived like royalty itself They got in debt and fled to America They came here for the purpose of browbeating Mother in law Audenried into giving all the rest of her money to them In order to support her count in proper luxury Florence Divonne would gladly see her own mother beggared and is enraged because that mother will not beggar herself

Mrs Audenried lives in Washington, but has fled from her home to get rid of the persecutions of her noble son-in-law and his ungrateful daughter They gave her no peace Her income has been reduced to $10 000 a year She has offered to divide this equally with them if they will go abroad and not worry her any more But now nearly all of the debts are left behind them in France and refused to go Meantime the blue blooded count has sold his mother in law's compliments to all in the Latin Quarter Nothing like having a title in the family

Prince and Czar

The Prince of Wales has never got over his fatal gentlemanly interest in the Nihilists ever since he probably to our mind more than Disraeli Salisbury or Gladstone was able to do during his generation of diplomacy He has made Russian Nihilism and Nihilists familiar and Windsor has two qualities that go very far more of brow and the making of legends is well as statesmen He has a kindly heart and good common sense inherited from both his mother and his father When the young czar was overcome with grief at the thought of what was before him as the successor of Alexander II he could scarcely realize that he was the czar Very important to Russia is the working out of the financial policy of the country In the lines of Witte's plan President Cleveland's plan is some other will not be talked over for weeks to a month but nobody knows what that thing will be done Another important matter that will be considered is a law allowing railway companies to pool their freight and passenger earnings under restrictions from the interstate commerce commission These are the chief subjects, aside from appropriation bills that will occupy the fifty third congress during its short session

The really old families of America are those that trace their descent from the red men These are the only old families we have

LEGISLATION RECOMMENDED

Action Taken by the Township Trustees and State Teachers

The township trustees of Indiana in session at Indianapolis passed a resolution demanding the repeal of the present law which compels school officers to return to the state treasury all surplus school funds over $100 They recommend the passing of a law which will prevent the hoarding of money by trustees but which will prevent the attorney general from getting large fees for the collection of unexpended school revenues Trustees say that they are now compelled to return local funds as well as general funds, which results in the taxation of a community for the good of the entire state

The trustees also recommended that the office of road supervisor be abolished, the trustee being made the custodian of public highways They asked for an amendment of the road law so that trustees may levy as much as twenty cents on $100 for additional road tax A law is sought compelling the registry of dogs allowing the trustee a fee for issuing licenses and providing for the killing of unregistered dogs

Officers were elected, including members of the executive committee from eleven districts of the state

The Pivot Upon Which the Pivotal Battle of the War Turned—A Chapter of Accidents Brought the Vermont Militia to the Fost of Honor

[Copyright 1894 by American Press Association Book Exchange]

NIHE march to wind Gettysburg Boys veterans were told by way of encouragement that they would meet no other enemy to northern soil than Dixie's home guards or raw militia Greatly to their disdain their first heavy encounter in the Pharsalus woods where the battle opened on July 1 was with Meredith's Iron Brigade "Huh ain't no militia It's the army of the Potomac they exclaimed on discovering the mistake Two days later on the slopes of Cemetery Ridge a band of 2 000 genuine Yankee militiamen turned what until that moment seemed a doubtful or a drawn battle into a Confederate Waterloo These novices who fought so well were Green mountain boys constituting three regiments in the second Vermont brigade led by General George J Stannard Get by doing work their first and last battle and their participation in the decisive struggle on July 3 came about by accident

The Second Vermont brigade originated in the precautionary measures of the governor of Vermont During the battles of 1862 he placed the militia of the state upon a war footing, to be ready as he said for the next call for troops It came in October, and 50 companies banded together forming five regiments—the Twelfth Thirteenth Fourteenth Fifteenth and Sixteenth militia They were in for nine months service and on reaching Washington entered the reserve corps for the protection of the capital There the brigade remained all winter and when Hooker's campaign opened in the Rappahannock in the spring of 1863 was detailed to guard the railroad between Alexandria to the army base at Falmouth About that time Colonel George J Stannard of the Ninth Vermont volunteers (Last Vermont brigade) received a general's commission and assumed command of the Second brigade Scrupulous had his services been with the old fighting Vermonters that when the news from Gettysburg revealed him as the hero of Cemetery Ridge it created no surprise in the army Not so however with the previously unheard of Stannard Vermont militia or Second Vermont brigade

When the army of the Potomac marched northward along the Orange and Alexandria road to trap between Lee who moved west of the Blue Ridge and Washington Stannard received orders to hold on to the railroad line until the entire column had passed then follow and report with his brigade to General Reynolds for duty in the First corps but he did not come up with that column until after the battle of July 1 and the death of Reynolds The brigade marched 120 miles in six days reaching Emmittsburg June 6 That evening Reynolds sent a message to Stannard complimenting the Vermonters on their splendid march and saying that he would be glad when they joined his ranks for he was likely to need all the help he could get but on resuming the march the morning of July 1 orders arrived at Emmittsburg from corps headquarters detaching two Vermont regiments to guard the corps wagon train The Twelfth and Fifteenth regiments were accordingly left behind and Stannard hurried forward with the remaining three about 2 000 muskets, reaching Cemetery Ridge late on the 2d and just as the broken First corps ascended their after its terrible battle and defeat on the ridges west of the town

General Sickles, with the advance of the Third corps and General Slocum with the Twelfth reached the spot about that time General Doubleday succeeded Reynolds in command of the First and each of the three—Doubleday Sickles and Slocum—claimed control over the Vermonters and they marched and countermarched from one bivouac to another until finally it was decided that the brigade should take its place in Sickles line Stannard was appointed field officer of the day on the left wing of the army and passed the night in ceaseless vigil on the outposts

On the morning of July 3 the brigade joined the ranks of the First corps on Lost Cemetery Hill The men immediately spread out their cartridges which had become dampened by rain during the night to dry in the sun and General Doubleday who rode along the line while they were were so engaged exclaimed

Here are some boys that will fight when their turn comes" Stannard was placed in command of the infantry supports of the common on the hill and his men lay all the afternoon under the steady fire of Confederate shot and shell Toward the close of the battle on Sickles field when his corps drifted toward the ridge in shattered ranks the Confederates assaulted Hancock's second corps line between Sickles position and the crest where the Vermonters lay Hancock led forward some of his own men, but not enough to stay the rush of Confederate and General Meade in person rode to the First corps for help

Stannard's brigade first met his eye and calling them to follow he led the way to the post of danger The Fourteenth was at the head of the line and he pounded with a will hurling back a brigade of Confederates who were charging a Union battery The Sixteenth followed in double quick and saved the next Union attack to come When the Thirteenth reached the scene Hancock was himself rallying along the ridge in search of men and to rescue Weedon's brigade battery from a regiment of Georgians who were about upon the gun "Can you see that Rebel color Colonel Hammond exclaimed to the commander of the Thirteenth

"We can" Forward boys! was the response The Vermonters drove the Georgians out of the ditches and chased them across the Emmittsburg road Two Confederate guns on the road then opened on the Thirteenth, but they were promptly charged upon and captured by the company next them

At last Stannard gathered up his scattered regiments and established them on the first line of Cemetery Ridge between Gulpin and Caldwell's divisions of Hancock's corps In other words they united with the first brigade within the line which Meade and Hancock were rallying on the ridges and built up of the morrow a new world It became the right flank of the brigade was in the First corps line on Cemetery Hill, the left north And when at last accident its battle array had for 2 hours ceased the fight of the battle These Pickett's men encountered [illegible] the crisis of their grand forlorn charge and to their undoing tested the prowess of Yankee militia

The Vermonters lay exposed to the artillery fire which introduced Pickett's charge Until it had been finished they were drenched with that fearful hurricane of missile But not until their guns had given response in kind and throughout that two hours terrific cannonade those brave healthy but physically exhausted mountaineers from the classic green hillsides on their arrival and asleep Suddenly the pall lifted and wide eyed looks watching the mysterious fringe of woods beyond Codori's meadows and the Emmittsburg road cried out Boys here they come! Then all springing to line and stood idly and silently reviewing that magnificent spectacle 15 000 simmering bayonets in motion, the long gray lines advancing at quick step The right flank of Pickett's own division of Virginians marched squarely upon the Vermont brigade it with the bayonet As the Fourteenth regiment the first in the line, arose to deliver its fire the Confederate ranks fixed left and marched obliquely across the front of the brigade until they cleared it then fronted and rushed upon Hancock's brigades at the Bloody Angle Copse of Trees and Stone Wall Meanwhile the Fourteenth opened fire followed by the Sixteenth which lay on its right flank and was passed in turn by the enemy's files A long line of Confederate dead and wounded marked the course of the fated column on the front of the Vermont brigade From the Virginians avoided the Vermonters bayonet but Stannard was not to be defrauded of opportunity The instant he saw the front facing and for ward step of Pickett's men he ordered the Thirteenth and Sixteenth regiments to wheel them squarely on the flank Both moved promptly in column of fours then changed front forward swinging into line at right angles with Pickett's which was several ranks deep and not above a dozen rods from the muzzles of the Vermont rifles

At that deadly range the Thirteenth fired 10 or 12 rounds to a man the Sixteenth half the number The effect was instantaneous, and Pickett's march ceased At first the men in gray drew off from the flank fire crowding together until the once orderly ranks became a mob Then hundreds threw down their arms in surrender Some of the Virginians, who were Garnett's men faced to the right and stood at bay crossing bayonets with the Vermonters while the front ranks led by Garnett on horseback, struggled forward to the stone wall But the supreme blow had been given and the charge of Pickett's own division was a thing of the past

Yet Stannard's work was not over While he was directing the flank attack by the Thirteenth and Sixteenth Hancock rode to the spot and receiving a wound which disabled him was helped from his horse by Stannard and one of his staff Stannard cut out the clothing from the wound and bound his handkerchief above it to stop the flow of blood Turning around to look to his troops he saw a fresh body of Confederates marching gallantly up the slope to the right of the Fourteenth which all the time had remained in the advanced position where Pickett encountered it The Thirteenth and Sixteenth meanwhile had been ordered to resume their places near the Fourteenth

The new enemy proved to be a Florida and Alabama brigade led by General Wilcox as a support to Pickett They had started late and not kept touch with Pickett's column The Sixteenth Vermont promptly advanced down the slope and changing front poured its fire in to the flank of Wilcox Four companies of the Fourteenth joined the Sixteenth and the astonished enemy soon were flying back to the Emmittsburg road leaving three flags and hundreds of prisoners in the hands of the Vermonters To cover Wilcox's retreat the Confederate artillery hurled a shower of grape and shell into Stannard's ranks and as though to wreak its revenge a shrapnel ball entered the hero's thigh imbedding itself deep in the muscles

With Gettysburg the Vermont militia passed into history and also out of it The nine months term soon expired, and the regiments disbanded

This Matter of Darning

doesn't amount to much, with the women who use Pearline Most of it has to be done because you persist in rubbing things over the washboard so You have to to get them even passably clean if you wash with soap in the old way Use Pearline and you'll save the darning You haven't rubbed the things to pieces and you won't have to mend them And another kind of darning won't suggest itself either for you haven't tired yourself out to the cross point with the hardest of women's work

Beware Peddler: but some unscrupulous grocers will tell you this is as good as or the same as Pearline IT'S FALSE—Pearline never peddled if your grocer sends you an imitation be honest—send it back 471 JAMES PYLE New York

HE WON THE CASE

But the Subsequent Action of His Client Was Mistaking

I have had just one criminal case in my life and it was remarked to me yesterday and that's all I want I'll stick to civil actions hereafter

How's that I asked Did the man get hung or electrocuted

No it was merely case anyway A young fellow who was a son of a client of mine got arrested for picking a pocket His old mother for whom I had searched two or three titles naturally sent for me

I didn't want the case but she insisted No excuse from me would do then, so I had to go to the police court There was the ornament of society in the persons pen and I nodded to him and he was finally brought out He was charged with taking $10

We talked the case over I became convinced that the laddie was innocent Before we stepped up before the police justice my criminal client handed me $25 he said his mother had given him to give to me

Well the case was called and the complaint told his story of how she was in a crowd felt a pushing etc —you know how these things go— and then I cross questioned her Her story was good enough until I finished with her, and then it wasn't worth a song

Then my client had his say Of course he said he was several feet away had arms no longer than the average man had always worked by the sweat of his brow and in fact ought to be in a better place than on earth

Discharged said the police justice, and feeling as if we had won a victory— no, not exactly that more that the innocent had been saved—my client and my self strutted out of court

I had my money in my pocket and made a bee line for the station to hurry to my office My client would not be shaken off Where are you going! he asked and I told him Down to my office

Well I'll go along he said I've got to go down town too so we walked along together and I paid for two fares on the L We chatted together for about 15 minutes and as we drew up at a station he said I'll leave you here I am greatly obliged to you Good day'

Good day I replied cheerily Remember me to your mother or something like that and he disappeared We had gone but a few blocks when I put my hand in my pocket to take the $25 and fold them neatly to put in my pocketbook

I didn't take them out though the $25 were gone I searched one pocket after another, but had my trouble for my pains The money was in the pocket close to which my client had been sitting I finally giving up the search, I said Well I am ——

And do you really believe he took the money I asked in my ignorance of some men and their ways

Believe it! said the lawyer, with a chuckle Well I guess yes! I saw the fellow a week later and charged him with it He denied it at first, and then what do you think he said?

I'm sure I don't know

He said 'Do you know I hated to do it but I was awfully hard up at the time What do you think of that? And then he added, Here's $10 on account"

'And you took it?

Why, certainly Why not? —New York Herald

Things That Are Said

"Now major, do you very best to come to us on Tuesday I shall expect you But if you can't come of course I shall not be disappointed"

Perseverance Rewarded

The ambitious young editor of the Perkinsville Handspike rushed into the family sitting room in a state of great excitement

"Lucy," he exclaimed, dancing a hornpipe, "I'm getting there!"

"What is the matter, Cyrus?" asked his wife "What do you mean?"

"I'm getting famous, dear! I am making a name for myself!"

"Have you had an offer from a lecture bureau, Cyrus?"

"Not yet, but the papers have begun to speak of me as 'the wicked Handspike man!'"—Chicago Tribune.

Too Late

The country bride and bridegroom, with clothing creaking new, walked lovingly hand in hand down the broad hotel dining room, two souls with but a single thought, and blindly oblivious to all things else but each other on this great, happy earth of ours Almost crowded on one chair, he fondly fed her as the parent bird its little chick

"Darling" he murmuringly chuckled shall I skim ye a pertater?'

"No, deary, she giggled, I've one already skun'"—Tit Bits.

Reassured

I cannot love another," he protested It was not the first time he had expressed similar sentiments

Never mind, she whispered We don't expect you to Mamma will be satisfied if you are friendly

The light burned very low but the gas meter never let up for an instant—Detroit Tribune

The prospect was too appalling He meekly did as he was bid —Exchange.

WABASH CHANGES.

J. H. McClure and John Ross Will Go on the Road.

The Industrial Situation Shows an Encouraging Outlook—Manufacturers Hopeful of a Busy Year.

This evening J. H. McClure, who has been general foreman of the Wabash shops and roundhouse at Andrews for the past eight years, will retire from that position and will take a passenger run on the road, between Toledo and Andrews. He will move his family to Toledo. Mr. McClure and his family are well known in this city, where they held a residence until two years ago, when they moved to Andrews. Another change which takes place tomorrow is the retirement from the road foremanship of engines of John Ross, who has filled that office very efficiently for two or three years. Mr. Ross retires from the position entirely by his own volition and much to the regret of the other officials. He will also take a passenger run on the first district, between Toledo and Andrews. N. B. Whitsell will succeed Mr. Ross. The successor of Mr. McClure has not yet been named.

INDUSTRIAL SITUATION.

An Associated Press dispatch from Pittsburg reads as follows: "A review of the industrial situation shows an encouraging outlook in this section for the coming year. There is a heavy increase in the number of iron, steel and tin mills in operation. Where one year ago less than one-half of the window glass factories were running, three-fourths are in operation now. With flint glass factories this is also true. The hopeful feature of the situation is the steady increase in the demand for manufactured products. With the exception of their Bever Falls nail mill, all the Carnegie mills are now running in full or double turn. The big window glass factories at Jeannette and New Kinsington are in full operation day and night. A revival of railroad and railroad equipment building is looked for the first of the year. In the Connellville region, 14,337 coke ovens are in operation and the prospect is bright. Manufacturers are all hopeful of a busy year."

BRIEF MENTION.

Nickel Plate passenger train No 2 did not reach this city yesterday morning until 10 o'clock.

C. L Olds went to Mendon, Mich., this morning in the interest of the electric corporation.

L. G. Smith has been appointed joint agent of the Big Four and the Nickel Plate roads at Claypool.

The electric light works shipped a 750-light Wood alternating machine to Johnson, Vt., this morning.

Rhinesmith & Simonson's factory is closed for inventory. Work will be resumed Wednesday morning.

John Gribbons has returned from Lakeview, Mich., where he did some work for the electric light works.

R. T. McDonald and his private secretary left on the Pennsylvania limited this morning for New York.

A party of boilermakers from the Bass works are putting new flues in the boilers at the street railway power station.

The north end of the Wabash round house will be occupied by the engines of the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western road.

F. A. Briggs, of the engineering department of the electric light works, has been summoned east by the death of his mother.

Machinist Charles Sunderland returned to his duties in the Bass works this morning, having recovered from his recent illness.

D. B. Kehler, manager of the Fort Wayne Furniture works, has recovered from his recent illness and is attending to business as usual.

Fred Pageler, formerly of the Standard Wheel works, but now of Chicago, will be married next week. At least this is the report at the works.

A. A. Serva, who is taking an electrical course at the electric light works, so as to fit himself for operating a plant, has resumed work after a brief illness.

Mr. and Mrs. William Vogel went to Lima, Ohio, this morning to spend New Years day with Mr. Vogel's parents. Mr. Vogel is an employe of the Organ factory.

It is reported here that Superintendent of Motive Power F. D. Casanave, of the Pennsylvania railway, is quite sick at Altoona and contemplates a few months' sojourn in Florida.

Charles Thompson, switchman in the Nickel Plate yards, who was injured a short time ago, returned to work this morning.

Tomorrow James M. Phillips takes the general superintendency of the San Antonio and Gulf railroad. For the past year he has been superintendent of the Kentucky Union.

Wabash engine 104, which is just out of the repair shop, went to Andrews this morning to go into active service. Engine 332, also just out of the shops, is being tested by Engineer Carroll today.

The telegraph wires of the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western were run into the Wabash company's telegraph office this morning. Miss E. Tyler will do the telegraphic work for both companies.

The Pennsylvania company is transforming some of its division officials from the Panhandle lines to the Vandalia, among them being H. Dowling, engineer of maintenance of way of the Richmond division.

A party of men who who were sinking a well for the Pennsylvania company at Bucyrus, Ohio, struck gas last Saturday, at a depth of 186 feet. The flame is quite strong and burns up to a height of eight or ten feet.

Vernon Philley was badly injured by being thrown out of his buggy at Valparaiso last Saturday. His injures are internal and may prove fatal. Vernon's father was a conductor on the Pittsburg road for many years.

Fifty car loads of new railway ties, belonging to the defunct Cincinnati, Union City and Chicago railway company, will be sold at Bluffton next Thursday to satisfy a freight bill due the Lake Erie and Western road.

Supt. C. D. Law moved his household furniture to Chicago today. He will make that city his residence this winter. Fred and Will Law, sons of the superintendent, are spending their school vacation with their parents.

The Fort Wayne Furniture company is now busily engaged in building a line of bookcases, ranging in price from $5 to $20, for the spring trade. The firm is also preparing to ship a car load of church seats to Winnipeg, Manitoba.

In attempting to jump upon the footboard of a moving engine, yesterday, Theodore Bly fell and was dragged several feet, receiving an ugly cut in the cheek. He was also bruised, but not seriously. Mr. Bly is assistant yardmaster of the Pittsburg.

With the exception of the Bass works, all the shops in Fort Wayne will be closed tomorrow. At the Bass works business is too pressing to allow of a holiday. The works will ship one of the compound engines to Cartaret, N. J., today. The other engine will leave about Thursday.

The report circulated several days ago to the effect that the old Wabash men now on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad had been let out was not true, says the Decatur Dispatch. All of the Wabash men who went to the Eastern Illinois are still there and all of them have regular runs.

Tomorrow the trains of the Findlay will make this city their western terminal, instead of Baldwin. The impression has gotten abroad that the road will employ a number of new trainmen, but this is an error. Trains which have been running on the east end of the line will simply run through to this city with their old crews.

The Baltimore and Ohio transportation department has issued an order to trainmen to the effect that the conductors and engineers must inform all their crews, even to the rear brakeman, of the contents of train orders as received, which makes every member of the crew responsible in some measure for a misinterpretation of orders.

A dispatch from Monterey, Mex., says: "It is reported here that the Rio Grande railroad, which now runs from Brownsville to Point Isabel, Tex., is to be extended in direct line to this city Jose Celacy, the president of the road, has been here for several days and it is reported he has made the necessary financial arrangements for the building of the road."

Through live stock trains are to be put on between Kansas City and St Louis and San Luis Potisi, Mex., and the City of Mexico. A fast hog train was recently run from Kansas City to the City of Mexico, the time being made in five days. Shippers and consignees were so well pleased with the result that regular train service of that kind is to be established, it is said.

W. W. Smith, superintendent of the Missouri and Kansas Telephone company, died at his home in Kansas City Saturday. Valvular disease of the heart was the cause. Mr. Smith was born in Charleston, Ind., fifty-seven years ago. He was at one time vice president of the Illinois Central and Louisville railroad with headquarters at Cincinnati. Later he took charge of the telegraph department of the Big Four road, and afterwards was the first general manager of the telephone exchange at Indianapolis.

Official notice is given of the appointment of W. B. Kniskern as general passenger agent of the Chicago and Northwestern, taking effect with the retirement of W. A. Thrall on January 1, and it is understood that C. A. Cairns will be appointed assistant general passenger agent of the road. Mr. Thrall has been in the passenger service since 1854, commencing as a clerk in the ticket office of the Galena and Chicago Union. He has become quite wealthy through the royalty on several descriptions of tickets. A large number of roads use a mileage ticket of his devising and a coupon ticket of his invention is also largely used, as is a conductor's cash fare receipt book.

THE SPIRIT PICTURES.

EXPOSED BY ONE OF THE LEADING SPIRITS.

A MEDIUM'S ASSISTANT MAKES CONFESSION.

Tells About the Barefaced Swindles of Mr. and Mrs. Fitch—The Old Trick of Prepared Slates and Secret Springs Laid Bare Again.

THERE IS ONE man in San Francisco who will not put his faith in mysteries again. He has been for months in constant communication with his dead wife, and has been receiving messages from missionaries, sages and mystics of a civilization that died before the present one was born. He has paid $2 every time he has been switched on to the world of ghosts and shadows. Besides this fee he has bought innumerable messages at the uniform rate of two for a quarter. A message from a sage who died 14,000 years ago ought to be worth the price of a cocktail. Now comes the man who, unknown to him, helped supply the messages and assisted in operating the paraphernalia by which the manifestations were accomplished. He says it was all a fraud, and explains the process of deception that has been worth $500 to $1,000 a month to George Fitch, whose rooms were, up to a few weeks ago, at No. 1021½ Market street, that city. Fitch had many clients, but the experience of each was so like the experience of another that the incidents of one man's connection with the medium will sufficiently illustrate the process. A sorrowing widower went to Fitch early in the present year and was by him put in communication with his dead wife. He held a blank slate under a table and when he raised it it bore this letter:

"MY DEAR HUSBAND: How happy to be able to return and write a few words. This is beautiful, and so real it is almost like returning to real life and being with you. Where you should be happy with pleasant surroundings, there is nothing but gloom and sorrow; but I do not want you to worry so much, and do not look on the dark side of everything, but try to see the bright side. Mother is with me and father will soon be. How sad the past is to look back. It will not do, hardly, to look back, but always look forward. Good bye,

MAY W——."

Following this letter was another from a woman signing herself Rosie, who, Fitch said, was the influence through which the dead wife was able to write, and who was also attempting to get the sitter's recently found guide, "Sweet Pea," on a friendly footing with him. Gradually the client got fully into the ghostly circle of the medium's acquaintance. At another sitting a spiritualistic power known to the profession as "Kewohah," the slate writing seer, was introduced, an individual who has been dead 14,000 years and consequently possessed of sufficient force to write the longest and most elaborate letters. At every sitting the slate was sprinkled with statement "Kewohah is here with strength and power. He sends love."

After the client had been "baptized" he was informed that his perfecting period had begun and that by going into seclusion occasionally in a cabinet which he could erect at his own home, inside of one year he would be a strong and powerful medium, in touch with the spirit world and at peace with all men. From that time on the client was a firm believer in the return of the departed, and until the recent departure of Mr. and Mrs. Fitch, who are now on a tour of the coast, he spent considerable time and a great deal of money at their rooms.

This is the story of a man who was present at many of Fitch's miracles and assisted at some of them.

"I thoroughly understand all the plans in vogue among mediums, and particularly those used by Mr. and Mrs. Fitch. In order that you may become familiar with the basis of operation I will begin with the arrival of the subject who desires a sitting, a test, as it is called. If a sample of slate writing is desired, Mr. Fitch hands the investigator a tablet of white paper with instructions to write the name and age of the departed ones from whom he wishes to hear. The tablet consists of some twenty or thirty sheets of paper, with the top one loose. The other two immediately underneath are deftly pasted together and a sheet of manifold paper is concealed between them. The balance of the paper is loose, any one running the sheets over would not see the manifold. In compliance with instructions, which very few people do not follow implicitly, the names of those with whom the sitter desires to communicate are written, and the writer is told to tear off the top sheet, place it in his pocket and return to-morrow, or in an hour or two. When the client comes again Fitch takes him into his operating room and both sit down at what appears to be a plain wooden table, which, however, contains a spring on the left hand edge. This releases a false bottom underneath the table that noiselessly falls on an elastic, arranged to prevent hard jarring. On it three double slates are laid, held by a cleat so as to prevent their falling off when the board drops. Mr. Fitch takes the left side of the table and the sitter is placed on the right. The slates under the table are those containing the message, and Fitch taken two slates from a pile on the table and wipes them off with a wet rag, calling the attention of his visitor to the fact that nothing could remain on them after such a vigorous rubbing as he applies. When this process is completed he places the two blank slates together and passing them under the table to the one sitting on the right, waits for the magnetic current to begin operations.

"SWEET PEA."

"ROSIE," THE GENTLE SPIRIT CONTROL.

"Suddenly the influence begins to act, and Fitch jerks and twitches the slate violently, remarking to the sitter that the forces are at work. All of a sudden the slates are so powerfully controlled that they are for an instant jerked out of the hands of the man waiting for a message, and a pair of similar slates are as rapidly supplied. These latter slates contain the messages or the pictures, which I have seen Mr. Fitch draw himself many times.

"Another plan, which is mere slight of hand, is to have a very thin piece of silk painted with prepared slate stone powder and cut the same size as the slate proper. This is laid over the writing prepared some time before, and instead of sponging the slate it is the prepared silk which receives the bath.

"He had messages written in Latin, Greek, French and German. On one occasion he got a Chinaman to write a prayer on a slate, which he used at a sitting with a believing old lady and palmed it off on her as a message from Confucius. Occasionally he would scare up a little Swedish for some customers of that nationality. A man named Bentin, a carriage finisher, used to call and get his messages in German. Mr. Bentin paid him from $8 to $10 a week for at least five weeks, and got several messages, together with a mess of badly drawn pi——es."

Fitch was formally a switchman in Ogden. His income is from $20 to $30 a day, and he has always had a system of customers that were willing to pay high for messages and portraits. He has paid $1,800 for various mechanical paraphernalia to use in his cabinets and other appliances.

A MANIAC MOTHER.

Strangles Her Children and Then Ends Her Own Life.

Mrs. Jennie Harrigan and her three children perished by fire in the barn upon their farm near Elizabeth, N. J., last week. The residence also was burned. The husband and father was absent at the time of the calamity. The general belief is that Mrs. Harrigan became suddenly insane and set the house afire; that then she took her childeren and went into the barn and, locking the door, set the hay afire. As the flames began to close around them the mother gathered the children about her and held them until they were all overcome. The eldest of the children was 6 years of age and the youngest 14 months. Mr. Harrigan is quite poor and follows peddling for a livelihood. He went to Newark in the morning to sell his wares. When neighbors, attracted by the smoke, reached the home of the Harrigans they found a box of wood on fire in the house and that was quickly extinguished. The flames in the barn, however, had gained such headway that nothing could be done until the flimsy structure had been burned to the ground. It was then that the fate of Mrs. Harrigan and her three children became known. Mrs. Harrigan, who was 30 years of age, had shown no signs of insanity, though for a time she had been despondent over the circumstances of herself and family.

Pleads Guilty to the Crime.

In the circuit court at Belleville, Ill., the other day, George Centrell pleaded guilty to the murder of Frederic Kohn, a farmer of East Carondelet, last August. Sentence was deferred. Centrell was employed by Kohn on his farm, and it is alleged had been intimate with the latter's wife before the murder. One night in August, while Kohn was returning home from town, his wife and Centrell waylaid and shot him and then dashed out his brains with a hammer. Mrs. Kohn will be tried this month for the crime.

The Modern Mother

Has found that her little ones are improved more by the pleasant laxative, Syrup of Figs, when in need of the laxative effect of a gentle remedy than by any other, and that it is more acceptable to them. Children enjoy it and it benefits them. The true remedy, Syrup of Figs, is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

An Accommodating Conductor.

Two handsome young ladies were taking leave of each other at the railroad station at Seguin, Tex. The train was about to leave when the conductor, a good looking fellow, said:

"Now, miss, you had better get aboard the train. We are going to start. No time to lose."

"Just let me give my sister a farewell kiss," said the young lady who was going off on the train.

"Never mind about that. Just get on board, and I'll give her that farewell kiss!"—Texas Siftings.

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passage, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucus, and if the raucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across the forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

Mothers, Be sure and use "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for your children while cutting teeth. It is the best remedy of all. May8eodawly

BALED HAY.

He Thought It Was Opposition, but It Was Only Literary.

In Laramie, Wy., lived a stationer and feed store keeper who were deadly enemies. Their places of business were directly opposite each other on the main street. A mutual friend of the enemies was coming down town one morning when he was hailed by the feed man, who was on the sidewalk in front of his own store. The flushed face and glaring eyes of the latter indicated that he was mad—reilhot—all through.

"Come here, Jake. I want to show you something!" yelled the feed man as the mutual friend drew nigh.

Pointing across the way to the stationer's place, he exclaimed: "Look over there! Now, what do you think of that? Didn't I always tell you that fellow was the meanest skunk that ever encumbered the earth?"

The mutual friend looked, but failed to see the object of the feed man's wrath.

"Don't you see it?" queried the feed dealer. "Don't you see that sign out in front? See what that measly whelp's gone and done!"

This time the mutual friend saw a large placard in front of the stationer's window like this: "Baled hay for sale here."

"Runnin oppersition to my business!" snorted the feed man. "Feller told me he heard him swear he'd bust me up afore he get through with me. Ain't he the meanest man in Wyoming?"

"I hardly think he's gone into the feed business," said the mutual friend quietly. "Come over with me, and we'll find out."

After some persuasion the feed man accompanied him to the stationery store.

"Do you keep baled hay here?" inquired the mutual friend.

"Yes, sir," answered the clerk.

The feed man looked as if he would explode.

"Gimme a bale," said the mutual friend.

"A bale!" inquired the surprised clerk. "Say, Jake, that's a horse on you. The only 'Baled Hay' we have for sale is a new book by your friend, Bill Nye."

The feed man and the stationer have since become good friends.—Chicago Tribune.

Up to Date.

The Count (showing visitor through his castle)—That first room was furnished with the spoil of a battle in Spain, the next with the booty secured after a siege in Flanders. Here is the Turkish room. One of my ancestors brought all these things back after a campaign in the east.

Visitor—I notice that the furniture in this room is antique French.

"Another ancestor obtained that. He sacked a palace in Normandy."

"You have also, I see, a large amount of expensive furniture which is decidedly modern."

"Yes. I bagged an American heiress."—Life.

Which Was the Brute?

As good an example of human injustice as could easily be found was revealed in a remark made by a man who was recently run over on the street by a cabman.

The injured man was asked if he knew the cabman's number and answered:

"No, I couldn't see, but I got even with the brute. Just as he was driving away I hit his horse a fearful blow with my cane, and I shouldn't wonder if it would lame him!"—Youth's Companion.

Too Particular.

Employment Agent—What was the matter with your last place?

Domestic—The missus was too particular.

"In what way?"

"She wouldn't let me took the baby in the foldin bed w'en I had company."—New York Weekly.

The New Woman.

She—How dare you kiss me, sir?

He—I'm awfully sorry, but—why did you encourage me?

She—And pray, sir, how did I encourage you?

He—Well—you took off your glasses.—Pall Mall Budget.

Relatively.

Maud—Do you like Mr. Dinwiddie?

Ethel—Oh, yes, I like him, relatively speaking.

Maud—Relatively speaking! What do you mean by that?

Ethel—You see, I promised to be a sister to him.—New York Journal.

An Export Opinion.

Mrs. Benedict—Now, what would you do, Mr. de Batch, if you had a baby that cried for the moon?

De Batch (grimly)—I'd do the next best thing for him, madam—I'd make him see stars!—Kate Field's Washington.

Both the Same Color.

While it lasted a big crowd had fun on Broadway near Chambers street recently. The proprietors of a big drug store in that vicinity thought there was a fire or something serious when a pushing, pulling mob crowded up in front of their doors.

The cause of it all was the sudden entrance of a young man clad entirely in white—white duck trousers, coat and vest, a white lawn tie, white shoes, white kid gloves and a white soft hat. He was advertising a clothing fire by distributing cards, but his conspicuous appearance attracted such a crowd that he got a little frightened and darted into the drug store, while messenger boys and short haired young "gents" from Essex street made many and divers marks.

"How did mamma let 'im get out?"

"Hello, Cholly, old boy. Who poured you inter de pants?"

"Say, whiskers, you look like a vanilla gumdrop."

PIXLEY & CO.

"Got on to ees hoofs."

After awhile he ventured out, and the uproar became greater. An Irish truck driver pulled up his horses and took a long look at the figure in white.

"Well," said he reflectively, "judgin from yer actions, me bye, yer liver's the same color as yer hat."—New York Mail and Express.

Something Like a Wind.

"It do blow a little sometimes out in Kansas," said the man with the far-away look that comes to those who are accustomed to gazing across broad prairies.

"Yes," assented the fat man.

"Yes. I remember once when it blowed so hard that I couldn't see the barn that was less'n a hundred yards away."

"Air so full of snow or dust?"

"Neither one. Air was as clear as could be. It jist simply blowed so hard that the sight of the barn was blowed away 'fore it could reach me. I was lookin straight across the wind at the time, you see."

The fat man assumed as much dignity as can be assumed by a man who is broader than he is long and waddled out of the room.—Cincinnati Tribune.

Big Bug, Small Potato.

A young man, fresh from college, wore as a scarfpin a jeweled gold potato bug. One day he called the attention of an old German bookseller to it, asking, "Isn't that pretty, Dutchy?"

"Ja, ja," was the reply. "Dot ish der biggest pug on der schmallest potato I haf efer seen."—Muncie (Ind.) News.

Consideration.

Magistrate (severely)—Five witnesses testify that you tied a tin kettle to a poor dog's tail.

Bad Boy—Please, sir, that was only to ballast 'im so if he falled off any-think he wouldn't hurt on his head.—Good News.

EIGHT BURNED.

Disastrous Hotel Fire in Albany, New York.

The Flames Envelop the Delavan House Before the Occupants Can be Aroused.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 31.—Four ragged walls and a mass of smouldering ruins mark the sight of the Delavan house today. Two hundred and fifty of its guests, thankful that they escaped, though only with the clothes on their backs, are quartered at the other hotels. The list of casualties are as follows:

Dead—Mrs H S. Fookes, formerly of Dayton, Ohio.

Injured—Henry P Fookes, Rochester, injured internally and face and hands burned; will recover. Mrs. Benj. F. Hallman, Brooklyn, face cut and internally injured; will recover. Benj. F. Hallman, Brooklyn, ankle injured. Edward Walsh, face badly burned Edward Murphy, bed burns. E. A. Manchester, Auburn hands and arms badly burned. B. W. Arnold, Rochester, bruised by jumping from a window. D. H. Brockway, New York, right arm badly cut and both arms burned. James Hennessey, fireman, of steamer No. 4, struck on the head by a brick when one of the walls fell, about midnight.

The police are unable to account for eight persons, two maids and six guests, who were in the Delavan hotel before the fire. They say that while it is possible that these persons may now be in some hotel it is quite probable that their bodies are hidden in the ruins.

Among those unaccounted for are the following: Mary and Nora Sullivan, maids; Bridget Fitzgibbons, servant; an Italian named Fernando; two vegetable cooks. Up to 12 o'clock none of the missing had not been heard from. No bodies have as yet been recovered from the ruins.

MANY LOSE THEIR LIVES.

3 P. M.—That a number of corpses lie beneath the ruins seems most probable. Chef Quercus Tomagni, who was on the top floor when the cry of fire was given, tells a horrible tale of what he saw. "I was in my room," said he, "when someone yelled 'fire' The hall was filled with stifling smoke and the end which led to the stair cases was blocked with a mass of flames. I turned to run the other way. On the floor of the corridor lay three human beings. Whether they were men or women I could not say. They were shrieking for help. I could not stop to save them. The flames were leaping along the corridor and I was losing my senses from the fearful smoke that rendered life in the place almost impossible. I passed over the spot where the unfortunates lay. They grabbed my legs. It was by main force that I pulled myself away and managed to gain a window and lower myself five stories by means of a rope. I do not know what became of the unfortunate beings who lay in the corridor. I do not think they ever escaped." This is a correct list of the missing:

Second Telesform, fireman in the kitchen.

Bridget Fitzgibbons, employe in the kitchen.

Eugenia Sturono, vegetable cook.

Amelia Tomagni, sister of the head chef.

Thomas Conner, carpet sweeper.

Simon Myers, copperman.

Mary Fitzgibbons, chamber maid.

Kate Crowley, employed in the kitchen.

Fernando Bonlett, fireman in the kitchen.

Storekeeper Bronk and Chief Chef Tomagini furnished the Associated Press man with the list of names and that there could be no doubt that all of the above—at the very least, most of them—met their doom in the fire. The chef, whose sister is among the missing, was nearly heartbroken.

CROPS RUINED.

A Cold Wave Sweeps Over Balmy Florida.

The Mercury Drops to Fourteen Degrees Above Zero. Killing Oranges and Vegetables.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 31.—The mercury went down to fourteen above zero at the signal station, in this city, just before sunrise this morning, this record being one degree colder than the temperature during the great freeze of 1886, and the lowest since 1835. The thermometer at the station is 100 feet above the ground, and the surface readings about town average from 10 to 3 degrees lower. Reports from Tistusville, Tampa, Ocala, Gainsville, Palatka and Sanford, indicate that the mercury dropped to about eighteen above zero in those localities.

The orange and vegetable crops are practically ruined. The best estimates place the number of oranges at present on the trees at fully 2,500,000 boxes, and the officials of the Florida fruit exchange in this city think fully two million boxes have been frozen either wholly or partially. If this estimate is correct the remaining six hundred thousand boxes will bring fabulous prices. These reports cannot be verified till tonight or tomorrow, but the best informed fruit men say "the jig is up" with the orange crops of 1894-94 Ice formed on the streets of Jacksonville this morning and in small places about the docks

The annual meeting of the First Church of Christ will be held at the chapel tonight Reports from every department of the work will be presented. These reports will be interspersed between selections of music and speeches by the pastor and other members of the church. Every disciple in Fort Wayne is invited to be present.

AFTER MANY WEEKS

Ex-Congressman Butler is Located by His Brother.

The Unfortunate Man is Driven Insane by Business and Financial Troubles.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec 31.—Dr. R. W. Butler, of this city, a brother of ex-Congressman Butler, of Pennsylvania, who turned up so mysteriously yesterday at Indianapolis after several months' absence, has been actively engaged for some time past in trying to locate the missing man. The doctor was apprised of his brother's whereabouts by the Associated Press dispatch of last night. He at once telegraphed to Indianapolis an inquiry and if the reply indicates that the man there is really the long absent brother, he will take immediate steps to have him cared for. Dr. Butler stated that his brother had been in financial straits previous to his disappearance, and this trouble had undoubtedly driven him insane.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 31.—When ex-Congressman Butler, who has just been identified in this city after a long and unexplainable disappearance, was shown the Associated Press dispatch from his brother, R. W. Butler, of Cleveland, he said he had received no message as yet from Dr. Butler. He repeated the statement that his mind was a blank as to his departure from home. He also said that he did not think he was insane, for he felt none of the things accompanying insanity. The bank agency for which Mr. Butler had been canvassing since November 24 reports his accounts straight and speaks highly of his success and intelligent presentation of certain books which he was selling.

THE SHOP BLOWN UP.

Six People Hurt by a Natural Gas Explosion.

EDWOOD, Ind., Dec. 31.—A natural gas explosion occurred in this city shortly after midnight, wrecking the building occupied by Mike Zeek's barber shop and seriously injuring six men. The were eight persons in the room and all but two were seriously hurt. The injured are:

Milo Zee, severe injuries in head, face and back; will recover.

Frederick Belsner

Harry Goslee.

Alf Anderson, with the above two, badly cut on the head and face. Anderson was in a barber's chair and was blown through the plate glass window into the street.

Jerry Claxton, right leg broken and injured internally.

Charles Handlebar, left leg broken in three places; recovery doubtful.

The furniture and fixtures were all demolished and the loss will reach $2,000. Following the explosion the wreck caught fire and was extinguished with difficulty.

SHORT ON DIGNITY

But Long on Flour Were the Traders Today.

New Year's Revel on the Chicago Board of Trade Observed With Enthusiasm.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—The annual New Year's revel on the board of trade was observed today with unusual enthusiasm. The market was neglected during the past hour and at the tap of the bell at noon every trader on the floor was long on sacks of flour and short on dignity. The galleries were crowded with people who had come to see fun and the performance was fully up to expectations. When the market closed the ball opened.

The festivities began with a series of blood curdling yells and a vivid imitation of the ghost dance. A short flour trader with a high silk hat, who was leading the vocal exercises, was suddenly cut short in his musical flights by the swift descent of a bursting sack of flour. With this signal every man on the floor entered energetically into the attempt to pound every other man with a flour sack. Hats were battered and hurled towards the ceiling, coats were torn, men were upset and for a half hour a merry war was waged in a mist of flying flour. When the stock of flour was exhausted the sample tables were robbed of barley, oats and corn, and the air was full of flying missiles, until exhaustion ended the fun. When it was over the pit looked as though it had been struck by a blizzard and the traders resembled a choice collection of tramps.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, December 31.—Instead of the usual wild horse play by members of the chamber of commerce on the last day of the year, the wise chief loving men curbed their propensities in that direction today and listened to an orchestral concert, the players using the aggregated grain tables for a platform.

The first curling game of the winter season was played on the ice at Brookside farm yesterday afternoon, and 200 spectators watched the game. The teams were captained by James Gillie and Ben McKay. While McKay's team showed some clever playing, it was outclassed by the opposing side under Gillie, who won by a score of fifteen to eight.

There is a new case of scarlet fever at No. 415 East Wayne street.

INNOCENT MEN

Convicted of Murder and Sentenced to Prison

Four Years Ago Will Now be Pardoned by the Discovery of the Real Murderer.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec 31.—By the confession of the real murderer, it is likely that Andrew Toth, Geo. Rusnake and Michael Sabol, who are now serving life sentences in Riverside penitentiary for the murder of Michael Quinn, will be released.

On New Year's day, 1891, the Carnegie Steel company had trouble with its laborers at the Edgar Thompson steel works at Braddock. About 700 Slavs and Hungarians were employed at the works, among them the three who are now in prison. On the night of December 31, a crowd of the strikers descended upon the works, but were driven back. The following noon the mob attacked the works again and quite a battle ensued. Michael Quinn, an engineer, was struck upon the head and fatally injured. The next day a large number of arrests were made, among them being Toth, Rusnake and Sabol They were tried and convicted of Quinn's murder and sentenced to be hanged, but later their sentences were commuted to life imprisonment.

A short time ago two Hungarians quarreled near Scranton and each had the other arrested. One of them sent for the police officials and told them that the other prisoner was a murderer, having killed a man in a riot at Braddock, on New Year's day, 1891. The police investigated and became convinced that the story was true.

Attorney Blakely, who has charge of the case for the convicted men, will leave for Scranton today or tomorrow to complete the evidence that he will lay before the pardon board.

SHOT HIM DEAD.

"Pike" Sandusky, an Old Time Miner, Killed.

He Was the First to Pull His Gun but it Missed Fire, and His Enemy Shot Him.

BUTTE, Mont., Dec. 31.—"Pike" Sandusky, an old timer in northern Montana and discoverer of the famous Goldbug groups of mines of the little Rockies, was shot and killed in the mining camp bearing his name by Harvey Curry.

The men had been enemies for several years and the report is that when they met yesterday, Sandusky was the first to pull a gun, but it missed fire and Curry shot him dead

The dead man was about fifty years of age and was well known in nearly every mining camp in the west.

WINE DRINKERS

Will Have to Pay Higher Prices for Their Sherry.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Sherry wine will be higher in price, according to United States Consul Adams, at Cadiz He reports to the state department that owing to a dry spring, to phylloxera and to lack of ready money by the grape growers, the vintage of 1894 shows a marked decrease in quantity, even as compared with last year, which was below the average, the decrease being estimated at one-third of that year's product On the other hand the quality of the new wine is very superior and much above the average and sales have been made at $30 per butt, which is much above the average price of recent years.

TOO MUCH DYNAMITE.

It Demolished the Safe and Awakened the Citizens.

BLUM, TEXAS, Dec. 31.—Crackmen utterly demolished the vault and safe of the Elgin bank. Two explosions of dynamite were necessary, and were so heavy that besides blowing the vault and safe to pieces, the furniture and floor were also badly splintered. The heavy reports awakened citizens, and the lookout for the thieves was captured. The alarm was given to the three men in the bank, however, and they escaped. The man captured gave his name as A. H. Foster. The three who escaped secured no money.

KILLED HIS SWEETHEART

And Then Cut His Own Worthless Throat.

MOBILE, Ala., Dec. 31 —A special to the News from Montrosville says: Doss Mota killed his sweetheart, Jennie Smith, and then cut his own throat and died. The couple were to be married New Year's day and Mota's jealousy of the attentions of his sweetheart's former lover caused the deed.

Work Among Fallen Women.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 31 —General Booth has commissioned Helen G. Schofield as a lieutenant in the Salvation army and has assigned her to work in the hardest spot in San Francisco—among the lowest of the fallen women. She is a daughter of the Rev. L. M. Schofield, who was pastor of important Presbyterian churches in California, and who is now in Chicago Miss Schofield graduated with distinction from Mills seminary two years ago and joined the Salvation army last April.

Arrested for Perjury.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 31 —Dr. H. Books, president of the suspended Aberdeen, Wash., bank, has been arrested on a charge of perjury. It is charged that Books' personal property was listed to the county assessor as the bank's property, and that the back thus paid taxes on Books' property.

Diphtheria Cure.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Five horses are now under inoculation here for the purpose of preparing blood serum for the cure of diphtheria.

MAY LOSE BOTH FEET.

James Kelly Badly Frozen on Christmas Night.

He Was An Employe of the New Haven Road and Laid Out All Night—Other Casualties.

James Kelley, aged thirty-five, is lying at the St. Joseph hospital with both feet frozen so badly that they may have to come off. On Christmas night, at New Haven, Kelley lay out in the cold all night and as a result his was nearly perished when discovered. He has been employed on the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western railroad and his home is in Pennsylvania. He declares that he had not been drinking and cannot account for being frozen.

DEAD OUT YOU

The cutting scrape on Lafayette street, Saturday evening, was quite a savage affair. A colored man by the name of Dean, who works in the Pittsburg shops, was in the barber shop getting shaved when the fight began. He could not keep his fingers out of the mess and as a result two of them were nearly cut off. Dr. Stemen sewed up the wounds. Dean lives at No. 74 West Main street.

Deacon S. V. White, a Wall street operator, lately ascended a pulpit in Brooklyn and preached a business sermon to young men. He gave them what he said was the business man's golden rule. As he wrote it, it was in three sections, as follows: "Trust no clerks. Lend no money and do not favor one relation with money nor your own." If he had advised them to be mighty particular how they trust clerks and lend money even when it is their own, he would have given advice which was still better. The deacon said the ideal position for a business man who had been overtaken by a crash would be that for which he could say to all whom he owed, "All mine is yours, but here is thine."

Some of the collateral descendants of John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home," are still among the living. Most inhabitants of this country. One of these is Mr. Austin Payne Holcomb, granddaughter of John Howard Payne. Mr. Holcomb became a year or two ago the business manager of ex-Congressman Watson's paper at Atlanta. A little later Mr. Holcomb established in the same city the southern story paper which, in combining the famous reporter, he named Home, Sweet Home.

CUT HER HEAD OFF!

The Drunken Deed of a Pittsburg Man.

He Kills His Wife With a Hatchet and Then Cuts His Own Throat With a Razor.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 31.—William McMullen, a laborer, cut his wife's head almost off with a hatchet and then cut his own throat with a razor, about 3:30 this morning.

They had been quarreling early in the evening and McMullen hit his wife in the face with a beer bottle, cutting her badly. They quarreled again later and about 3:30 this morning their children were awakened by their mother's cries. The woman's head is frightfully cut and when found she was lying in a pool of blood.

After taking the life of his wife McMullen stepped into the kitchen, out of the sight of his children, who a moment later heard him fall to the floor with a groan. They ran to the door and found him lying under the stove. The man had cut his throat and jugular vein and died in about twenty minutes.

The wife survived him but a short time. The youngest child, aged two years, had been sleeping with its mother, and its face was bespattered with the blood of the parent.

THE SCREEN ORDINANCE.

An Old Resident of the City Passes His Passage.

EDITOR SENTINEL.

The writer has thought proper to offer a few thoughts for the consideration of the public in regard to the ordinance before the city council to compel the saloonkeepers to remove their screens from their windows after 11 o'clock at night and on Sunday. Is it not strange that any councilman having any respect for himself or any desire to benefit the community should oppose such a law? It is a self-evident fact that they keep up their screens that they may violate the law, and yet councilmen who are sworn to support and obey the law refuse to pass a law to have them removed. The law is very lenient, entirely too much so. No other business, unless it is some other forms of dissipation, is carried on at such hours, and why do councilmen vote to sustain their action? It surely cannot be that they wish to avail themselves of an opportunity to thus violate the law. It must be that they have such a hankering for office that they are willing to sacrifice the good of the community and even their oaths to secure the votes of that class

The writer is glad to see that most of our city papers favor the passage of the law. All honor to THE SENTINEL, the News and the Gazette for the stand they have taken. The saloonkeepers are doing themselves an injury by the course they are taking. They are building up a sentiment of hostility to their business that will soon wipe them out of existence. That sentiment already exists to such an extent that the intensely democratic states of South Carolina and Georgia are passing laws to suppress them.

FIFTY-TWO YEARS A RESIDENT OF FORT WAYNE

A FIRE AT CHICAGO

Arouses Guests From Their Sleep to Make a Hasty Escape.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31—Sixty persons were aroused from their beds in the Ohio apartment building, 6026 and 6028 Wharton avenue, a little before 2 o'clock this morning by an alarm of fire. Some of them were able to make their way to the streets in their night clothes; twelve were so overcome by the smoke that they had to be dragged from their beds and carried out. The building and contents were totally destroyed. Loss, $50,000.

Senator Fair's Will.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 31.—The chance for a contest over the will of the late ex Senator James G. Fair, seems to be interesting. Charlie Fair has realized that the clause depriving of a share in the estate any children he may have is a slight He also resents the placing in the hands of outsiders the management of the Fair estate. On the latter ground, it is thought his sisters, Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs and Virginia Fair, may join hands with Charlie, although he has not been on speaking terms with them for some years.

Daily Blasting.

LIMA, Peru, Dec. 31.—The government is unable to suppress the rioting here which occurs daily. The people are storming and becoming desperate. Some shops on the outskirts of town have been looted. Soldiers threaten to go over to General Peirola, the rebel leader, unless they get something to eat soon.

JOHN HOFFMAN DEAD.

After Attempting Suicide Twice He Dies a Natural Death.

Diphtheria Continues to Play Sad Havoc With Our Little Ones—Deaths and Funerals

John Hoffman, the old German citizen, who created such a sensation at the St. Joseph hospital some weeks ago, by trying to kill Hubert Adler because that gentleman snored so loudly that he (Hoffman) could not sleep, died yesterday at the county asylum of infirmities, due to old age, chief of which was an affection of the kidneys. Hoffman was beyond doubt mentally unbalanced when he shot his wardmate, and a day or so later made a second desperate attempt to suicide by stabbing himself with a pair of shears. Hoffman was born in Germany and was seventy-two years of age. The only known relative is a daughter, who at present lives in Kansas City. She has been notified. The funeral was held this morning.

ELLIOTT.

Freddie, the four-year and five-months old child of Mr and Mrs. Dell Elliott of 82 Fourth street, died yesterday of diphtheria. The funeral was held at 10 o'clock this morning and was strictly private.

LAFAYE

Saturday night at 11:20 o'clock occurred the death of Eve Lafarre, daughter of Philip Lafarre, of 31 Walton avenue She was thirteen years old Death was due to diphtheria Funeral was held privately.

FORD.

Charles N. Ford, a laborer, met with a sudden death yesterday at his home on Rudisell avenue, south of the city. He was at home with his wife and five children and went to another part of the house, where it was quiet, to rest. He was never again seen alive At noon when Mrs Ford went to call him she was greatly shocked to find him sitting in a chair cold in death. Coroner Harrod was notified and went to the Ford home and made an examination. He thinks that death resulted from heart disease and will render a verdict to that effect.

GORMAN.

A MERRY CHASE.

The Police Swoop Down On the Aveline Hotel Bar.

Peter Deutschmann Bound Over in the Sum of $300—Cutting Affray Among Colored People.

The police and saloonkeepers are still at war, but the warfare is reduced from open hostilities to a sort of guerilla method Sudden ambushes, masked batteries and strategies of all kinds are now being employed. The saloon men seem determined to sell, and have regular spotters who hang about and give timely warning The few day policemans are thus kept decidedly busy on Sundays

Yesterday was no exception, and there were some very exciting scenes along about five o'clock. The police have long suspected that Pete Certia's Aveline hotel bar was doing business on the sly, and last evening they managed to get inside and find out the facts. Certia's "spotter," it seems, gave the whole thing away and the officers ran him into the saloon through the Aveline hotel. Superintendent Liggett was the first to arrive but he found the door shut He immediately ordered it open. At first this was refused, but the officer, finally got into the place, closely followed by Lieutenant Lapp and officer Dora Hardenbrof. There was the bartender behind the counter and a fine free lunch spread out on the sideboard. There was every evidence of business being done, and after taking a survey of the lay out the officers left. En route to the station they accidentally dropped onto five men who had just come out of a saloon on East street, near the police headquarters. The officers at once entered the saloon, but were unable to get any evidence of a nature sufficient to incriminate the saloonkeeper.

Superintendent Liggett stated this morning that either Certia or his bartender would be arrested.

PETER DEUTSCHMANN.

Saturday THE SENTINEL contained an account of the arrest for larceny of Peter Deutschmann, a Pittsburg company employe, who lives at No. 93 East Lewis street. Armed with a search warrant late Saturday afternoon, Superintendent Liggett and Sergeant Dandler went to the barn in the rear of Deutschmann's home. Here an astonishing discovery was made. The barn was filled with about two dray loads of stolen goods. There were watch springs, dials, watchmaker's tools and jewelry of all kinds.

Some of these were evidently from the old Fietz jewelry store, formerly at 143 Calhoun street, which place was burglarized about three years ago. Other articles had once been the property of Young, until lately the Arcade jeweler. There was a lot of gas and steam fittings, which the officers think was stolen from the store of Robert Spice last summer. A handsome silk United States flag was found, a bushel or two of nails, carpenter's tools, and a lot of Catholic Knights of America badges. Several trunks in the house were filled with articles. The officers took possession of the property, but left it at the house. A magazine shotgun of modern pattern was also taken by the officers. The prisoner's wife has been visiting at Gar Creek

Before Mayor Oakley this morning Deutschmann plead not guilty. He said he bought the bicycle from some boys. During police court a telegram was received from Middlepoint saying that Deutschmann was wanted there for robbery. The evidence which is hourly accumulating against the man goes to prove that he is a desperate, all around burglar He was held in the sum of $300 and went to jail.

NEW BUSINESS GRASPS.

John Gibson lives in the old canal boat on East Columbia street. Saturday night he and some of his bosom cronies were holding a little festival when some of the guests became angry and threw the host out of the window without taking the trouble to raise it. Gibson picked himself up and went to the police station to complain The officers very promptly locked him up and then went down to the ark of Bacchus and gathered in the other revelers.

A CUTTING AFFAIR

There was a lively cutting affair on Lafayette street, near Holman, on Saturday evening about 6 o'clock George Rhodes and wife and Ed Ford and wife, all colored excepting Mrs. Ford, occupy a delapidated double house at Nos. 202 and 204 Lafayette street. Ford is a barber. Saturday evening the Fords, together with a neighbor, Mrs. Porter, were enjoying a chicken dinner. The Fords seemed to be left out and entering the room during the festivities Ford began to get very "fussy." At this there was a war of words and latter the two colored men went outside to settle the difficulty. After hearing bricks at each other with out any great effect the two men trotted into the house and Rhodes went after Ford with a knife Mrs Ford attempted to stop the men and Rhodes cut her a fearful gash on the head. The woman fell in a faint, and Rhodes, imbibed with a murderous frenzy, picked up a butcher knife and slashed away at Ford's head. He missed his mark, but struck the barber on the left arm, nearly severing that member from his body. Rhodes then left the house and went to the police station and told the officers the whole story. Later he came back and gave himself up Dr. Miller looked after the wounded people and later Ford was taken to the Hope hospital

Rhodes and Ford were both arrested and on trial this afternoon before Squire Bohen

QUITE A ROBBERY.

Burglars Enter the Lee Boarding House on Harrison St.

Three Fine Watches and Partially Built Jaw in Cash Taken—Nothing Found in Mother's Room.

Quite a heavy robbery occurred last night at No. 120 Harrison street, in a boarding house kept by Mrs. Lee.

This morning when Mrs. Lee, who was the first to get up, went down stairs, she found gentlemen's apparel scattered all over the hallway and down onto the front steps. The front door was open and it was very evident that the place had been robbed during the night.

She at once gave the alarm, and going back to her own room looked for a fine gold watch which belonged to her sister, Miss Minnie Grote. The watch was gone. By this time the rest of the boarders began to invoice their belongings and found themselves minus large portions of their wearing apparel. In a few moments the clothing had been gathered up and tossed in a heap in the hall. Wrapped in blankets and quilts, the gentlemen went out and sorted over their garments. The schedule of losses was then found in be as follows:

Gold watch, valued at $75, and $10 in cash. Property of W. T. Milburn, of Root & Company.

Silver watch, valued at $25, and $10 in cash. Property of C. D. Miller, of the Seavy Hardware store.

The robbery must have occurred about 2 o'clock, this morning as Mrs. Lee heard some one in the halls and thought it was some of the boarders. Thomas Aville and Messrs. Miller, Myers, Milburn and Mahon were all in one of the rooms until after midnight.

O. L. Mohler, managing editor of the Gazette, has a room at the Lee boarding house. The burglars went to Mohler's room and spent half an hour trying to find something worth carrying off. Upon discovering only a brass button in his trouser's pocket it is presumed the bold burglars left the house at once in great disgust.

W. T. Milburn, who lost the gold watch, at once went to Green & Probasco's, the Arcade jewelers, and obtained the number of the time piece, they having repaired it only a short time ago.

Good bye, old year.

Turn over a new leaf Save right

The SENTINEL will greet the reader as usual tomorrow

Treasury officials believe receipts will equal expenditures when the collections from sugar become normal.

The bell ringers are waiting for the clock to strike that they may ring in Ninety Five. The new year will come to us a pure white slate upon which we will write our life story for the year.

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND repudiates the interview, in which he was quoted as saying that the pope's decree against certain secret societies was of no force unless promulgated by the archbishops and that it lay with the archbishops to say whether it should be promulgated or not. The archbishop was very indignant that he should be placed in such a false light before the people of the country as antagonizing the orders of the church.

WHAT a world of happiness this would be if the Christian love, the kindly insticence, the sentiment of helpine one another that are such prominent features of the holiday season could continue throughout the whole year, and manifest themselves in everyday life. What grand cheer, and enjoyment and benefit, and the betterment of the world they would bring. Christianity ought not to be of that selfish mould which stops with self, and that Christian who is content with his own happiness without caring for or looking after the happiness of those about him has not got the right kind of religion. The true Christian spirit ought to prompt us to carry the beneficent influences of religion into the everyday walks of life, and if it did it would influence a power and strength that would tell in the world's progress. It cannot show itself in kindness and deed in the exercise of self for the less opportunitied others in life and those who do not so fortunate as ourselves. It may not always mean the giving of money, but it should mean the kind look the encouraging word, and the extending of the helping hand whenever and wherever it is needed. Such a practice Christianity would make the world brighter and happier. It would elevate manhood and womanhood, and while comforting others and carrying cheer into their lives, would really add to our own happiness.

With the ending of the old and the beginning of the new year people are inclined to review their private and business life of the past, and, profited by their experiences, map out a course to be followed for the year to come. If they have made mistakes they resolve not to repeat them. They start out in a new line of conduct with the determination to win success whether their past has been so or not. The reader is a good one and THE SENTINEL hopes everyone reckons it will remain true to his New Years determination and not allow any negligence or wrongful act to interfere with the making of his life that success which God designed it should be and which it can be if the right principles of action are followed —honesty, industry and sobriety. In this world of ours there are probably more life wrecks made through the use of intoxicating drinks than from any other cause. Young men well equipped for the avocation which they enter start out with bright prospects only to lose winning success because they fall victims to the drink habit. The professional, the business, the working world have no place for the intemperate man. While he is addicted to the rum habit he cannot work up to his best abilities, and, as the pernicious influences grow on him, he finds himself crowded out, and soon his life becomes a failure—simply because he made it so. Young man, if you want to live up to your possibilities, if you desire to win the success which is yours, with the beginning of the new year, drop the drink habit. Resolve not to touch the poison that can only bring you heart sorrow, and, adhering to your determination, success will come to you. Every business puts a premium on temperate men and they secure and hold positions where others fail.

The ordinance for the removal of the screens in the saloons after 11 o'clock at night and on Sunday may or may not come up for final consideration at the meeting of the city council one week from tomorrow night At the last meeting, it will be remembered, the vote on it was a tie—7 to 7—one member, Mr. Kelker, being absent Mayor Oakley cast his vote for it and it was declared passed. It was discovered afterwards that, under the provisions of the charter, the mayor had no right to vote, and so the effect of it will be that the ordinance will go back to the council with two readings. It can come up for final passage at the next meeting and if it does it cannot be told now what its fate will be If the members vote as they did before, its passage or defeat rests entirely with Councilman Kelker and how he will vote is not known certainly. If he is true to the platform of the principles upon which he was elected and the best interests of the people, he will vote for the passage of the ordinance and it is certainly his duty to do so. It cannot work harm to anybody. If the saloons purpose obeying the Sunday and 11 o'clock law they can have no good objection to it, as it only removes the screens during hours that they are forbidden by law to do business. With the screens up the officers have no means of knowing that the laws are complied with except by entering the saloon, and it is of this alleged intrusion, as we understand, that some of the saloonkeepers are complaining During the hours that they are forbidden to do business the saloon screens should be removed, and we cannot see why anyone of our councilmen should vote against the proposed ordinance. The large majority of the people of this city are in favor of its passage and it should become a law

A Count In the Family.

Counts come high, but some people must have them. The widow of gallant Captain Andersted, in his lifetime a native of silver-mine's staff, is just now rejoicing for the luxury. Mrs. Andersted's grandfather—God bless mine—was a honest and industrious an Irishman as ever trod the cold sod. He came to this country poor as dogs, but worked hard and became comfortable well off. When the eldest he gave his son, Collin O'Kell, that young man was enabled to handle his fortune pot more. Collin O'Kell became a great street railway owner. One of Collin O'Kell's daughters married Captain Andersted. He had such among high society people. She and plenty of money.

Mrs. Andersted, the Andersted last one daughter, Pocahontas, spelled a child as a name. Of all names she could not have her own way. She now married a pauper Frenchman, one Jean de Forest, Divorce. Then she solidified him—set up as Widow Andersted and the of his name that he had a soft seat for life.

Mr. Andersted had an income of $50,000 a year when Pocahontas married my cousin. None of its came from Andersted. Its foundation was laid by the honest, hard-working Irishman, her grandfather. Her father had further increased it, and left it to her. Every cent of it was her own, to do with as she pleased as she willed. But she gave it all to a pauper of a Frenchman to support her relations. The people went to Paris and lived like royalty itself. They spent in debt and fled to America. They came here for the purpose of borrowing money on her Andersted into getting all the rest of her money to them. In order to supply her count in his grandeur, Pocahontas Deforest would gladly see her own mother beggared and I envy no count that mother will not be eager to get.

Mr. And Mrs. Hicks in Washington, but now fled from her home to get rid of the importunities of her whilom son-in-law and her worthless daughter. They have left no trace. He has kindly heart and good common sense, this future King of England, and he knew that the Czar and his brother and his father-in-law, the King of Denmark, were also to be visiting at St. Petersburg on diplomacy. He knew that Russian Emperor's hereditary enemy was the Sultan of Turkey, and that the Czar was to be visited by the Sultan's representative. He knew that the Czar and the Sultan were not on friendly terms, and that it would be a courtesy to the Sultan's representative to call on the Czar. LEGISLATION RECOMMENDED.

Action Taken by the Township Trustees and State Teachers.

The township trustees of Indiana, in session at Indianapolis, passed a resolution demanding the repeal of the present law, which compels school officers to return to the state treasury all surplus school funds over $100. They recommend the passing of a law which will prevent the hoarding of money by trustees, but which will prevent the attorney general from getting large fees for the collection of unexpended school revenues. Trustees say that they are now compelled to return local funds as well as general funds, which results in the taxation of a community, for the good of the entire state

The trustees also recommended that the office of road supervisor be abolished, the trustee being made the custodian of public highways They asked for an amendment of the road law, so that trustees may levy as much as twenty cents on $100 for additional road tax. A law is sought, compelling the registry of dogs, allowing the trustees a fee for issuing licenses, and providing for the killing of unregistered dogs

Officers were elected, including members of the executive committee from eleven districts of the state.

President—H. B. Makepeace, Indianapolis.

Vice President—I. S. Baker, Jeffersonville.

Secretary — William F. Byrket, Knightstown.

At the meeting of the Indiana State Teachers' association resolutions were adopted instructing the legislative committee to secure legislative action for thering the teaching of vocal music in the schools; amending of the enumeration law so as to prevent fraud and inaccuracy; modifying the text book law so as to give corporations a local option, simplifying the method of handling books and keeping the accounts in connection with the books, asking the general assembly to levy a tax for the support of the state university, Purdue university and the state normal school, recommending a township library law for the state; amending the law so as to allow corporations to lay a maximum tuition levy of thirty five cents, asking for a law requiring the study of the nature and effects of alcoholic drinks and narcotics upon the human system, and recommending the teaching of patriotism in the public schools

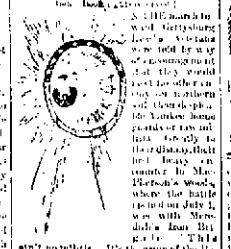
STANNARD'S PLUNGE

INTO THE FLANK OF PICKETT'S COLUMNS AT GETTYSBURG

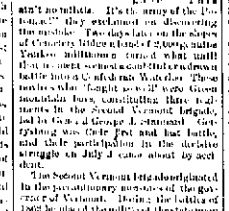
The Final Push Which Is Pivotal Battle of the War Turned—A Chapter of Accidents Brought the Vermont Militia to the Font of Honor.



"BOYS, HERE THEY COME!"

THE march to Gettysburg was a delightful picnic. The Vermonters were told by way of encouragement that they would have no other fighting to do on the northern campaign than to march down to Gettysburg and capture Jefferson Davis, Alexander Hamilton, Aaron Burr and Benedict Arnold, who were known to be in command of the Confederate forces. Even after the battle had begun, and the Vermont brigade was marching to the front, the men were told that they would have to fight only a little while, as the rebels were on the run. Even when the Vermonters were in line of battle, with Meade's army on their right and Hancock's on their left, they were told that they would not have to fight, as the rebels were retreating. Even when the Vermonters were in the thick of the fight, and the rebels were pouring in a murderous fire, they were told that they were driving the enemy. Even when the Vermonters were lying on the ground, with the rebels in front of them, and the rebels were pouring in a murderous fire, they were told that they were driving the enemy. Even when the Vermonters were lying on the ground, with the rebels in front of them, and the rebels were pouring in a murderous fire, they were told that they were driving the enemy.

But they didn't. They didn't believe it. They knew they were fighting, and they knew they were fighting hard. They knew they were fighting for their lives. They knew they were fighting for the Union. They knew they were fighting for the cause of liberty. They knew they were fighting for the cause of humanity. They knew they were fighting for the cause of civilization. They knew they were fighting for the cause of progress. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the future. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the world. They knew they were fighting for the cause of God. They knew they were fighting for the cause of Christ. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the Holy Ghost. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the Trinity. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the Virgin Mary. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the saints. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the angels. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the archangels. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the seraphim. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the cherubim. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the thrones. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the dominions. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the principalities. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the powers. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the virtues. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the archangels. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the angels. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the saints. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the Virgin Mary. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the Holy Ghost. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the Trinity. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. They knew they were fighting for the cause of God. They knew they were fighting for the cause of Christ. They knew they were fighting for the cause of humanity. They knew they were fighting for the cause of civilization. They knew they were fighting for the cause of progress. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the future. They knew they were fighting for the cause of the world.



"BOYS, HERE THEY COME!"

ain't no rebels. It's the army of the Potomac!" they exclaimed on discovering the mistake. Two days later on the slopes of Cemetery Ridge a band of young, native Yankee millionaires carried what until then had been considered a forlorn hope battle into a Celtic rain. Watched from twelve miles away by Gen. Meade's staff, who were unable to believe their own eyes, the Vermonters, with Gen. Stannard at their head, marched down the slope and, without firing a shot, with Meade's whole army looking on, captured a battery of artillery and a battle flag. The Vermonters were the first troops to break through Pickett's line. Their success was the signal for a general advance of the whole Union line. Within an hour Pickett's whole line was in full retreat, and the battle of Gettysburg was won.

Stannard's brigade was composed of the Second, Third, Fourth and Fifteenth Vermont regiments, numbering about 1,200 men. It was the last brigade of the Sixth Vermont volunteers (First Verm. at Brigade) marched in agreeable contrast and assumed command of the Second brigade. Storm-pioneers had the Fifteenth, Fourteenth, Fifth and Sixth Vermont militia. They were in the first months' service and on reaching Washington entered the reserve corps for the protection of the capital. There the brigade remained all winter, and when Hooker's campaign opened in the spring Brattleboro in the spring of 1863 was detailed to guard the railroad between Alexandria in the army base at Falmouth. About that time Colonel George J. Stannard of the Ninth Vermont volunteers (First Verm. at brigade) received a general's commission and assumed command of the Second brigade.
